

Amesville Market Sales (Approved 04/11/2018)

The Amesville Market Cart operates from 1:00 pm till 5:00 pm on the second Saturday each month on Route 550 across from the Coonskin Crossing. We will accommodate as many vendors as possible.

Some basic guidelines:

No illegal items for sale.

No sale of weapons.

No drugs or alcohol permitted at the market cart.

All sales transactions should take place off the 550 road surface.

Please be aware that traffic will be moving along Route 550 and you should not block traffic.

You are responsible for any state tax or vendor permits that are needed.

No prepared food is allowed, only baked goods (Cottage Foods, see below) and produce.

The Amesville Market is not a registered Farmer's Market with the USDA and Ohio. Therefore you should be aware of requirements.

Ohio law has two categories of regulation that include baked goods: cottage food regulations and home bakery regulations. Knowing which category your baked goods fall under will determine which laws apply to you. The major difference between the two is whether or not the baked good is considered "potentially hazardous" for consumption if not prepared and managed properly.

Cottage Foods: A "cottage food operation" is an operation in a person's home (i.e., in the cottage) where food items that are not potentially hazardous are produced for sale. Ohio Revised Code section 3715.01(A)(19). Ohio law provides a list of baked goods that are cottage foods because they are not potentially hazardous: cookies, breads, brownies, fruit pies, cakes, unfilled baked donuts, granola and pizzelles. Because these cottage foods do not pose high food safety risks, they are not highly regulated. A few important questions illustrate Ohio's cottage food laws:

- If I want to produce and sell a cottage food, do I need a license from ODA?

No; the Ohio Department of Agriculture does not require a license if you plan to sell non-potentially hazardous "cottage foods" such as cakes, brownies, breads, fruit pies and cookies. No additional license is needed from the local health department where the farmer's market is located.

- Will my home kitchen where I produce the cottage food need to be inspected?

No inspection is required for a home kitchen producing "cottage foods."

- What do I need to do to sell my cottage food at a registered farmer's market?

You must properly label the baked good (see specific labeling requirements here). The label must contain the statement: "This Product is Home Produced." This alerts potential buyers that the food was produced in a private home that is not subject to inspection.

- Can I sell my cottage food at any farmer's market?

Under the Ohio cottage food law, you may only sell cottage foods within the state of Ohio.

Home Bakeries

If you plan to produce "potentially hazardous" baked goods, then you must abide by Ohio's regulations for "home bakeries." The food safety risks posed by potentially hazardous foods lead to a higher level of regulation over Ohio's home bakeries.

▪ What foods are “potentially hazardous” foods?

Potentially hazardous foods are those that are in a form capable of supporting rapid and progressive growth of infectious or toxigenic microorganisms—these are food products that require temperature control because they create risks for sickness if not prepared and handled properly. Examples of potentially hazardous baked goods are cheesecakes, custard pies, filled donuts and cream pies – think of baked goods that typically need to be refrigerated.

▪ Do I need a license to operate a “home bakery”?

Yes, you are required to obtain a license from the Ohio Department of Agriculture to operate as a “home bakery.” There is an annual license fee of $10. Also, a local license will be required. Contact the local health department where the farmer’s market in which you will sell is located to obtain a license from them for selling the “home bakery” goods in their market. If you are selling cheesecake for example, not only do you need a home bakery license from ODA to produce the cheesecake in your home, but you will also need a license from the local health department to sell the product at the farmer’s market.

▪ Will my “home bakery” need to be inspected?

Yes. You will be subject to inspections by the Ohio Department of Agriculture. A few requirements a home bakery kitchen must meet include: being in good repair, being clean and easily cleanable, having no carpeted floors, being pest free, having no pets in the home, and having a mechanical refrigerator equipped with a thermometer.

▪ What foods may I produce in my “home bakery”?

In addition to being able to produce the potentially hazardous baked goods such as cheesecakes, custard pies and cream pies, you may also produce those baked goods that fall under the “cottage foods” definition—cakes, cookies, brownies, etc.

▪ What do I need to do to sell goods from my “home bakery” at a registered farmer’s market?

Just as with cottage foods, you must properly label all baked goods from a “home bakery” (see specific labeling requirements here).

▪ Can I sell my “home bakery” goods at any farmer’s market?

Maybe. Unlike cottage food products, a baked good produced under a home bakery license may be sold and distributed outside of Ohio. You may be able to sell your baked good at a farmer’s market outside of Ohio, but it is highly likely there would be additional requirements, such as obtaining a license from the local health department where the market is located.
